NDDOT reminds motorists to drive safely this Fourth of July holiday

The Fourth of July holiday is a busy time for travel in North Dakota. Many people are visiting friends and relatives, going boating, camping or taking in some of the state's beautiful scenery. As you travel, the North Dakota Department of Transportation (NDDOT) reminds motorists they can plan ahead by calling 511 from any type of phone or visiting the Travel Information Map on the NDDOT website at www.dot.nd.gov to receive the most current road conditions.

Motorists can also use the Travel Information Map to find locations of current construction projects throughout the state. The traveling public should use caution when driving through construction zones by allowing extra distance between their vehicles and the vehicles in front of them, and obeying flaggers and posted signs.

The NDDOT urges motorists to drive safely by always buckling seat belts, obeying posted signs and never driving distracted or drinking and driving.
